Government Reloaded

Governments collaborating on new tech policies globally

Significant governmental shifts and changes ahead

In the past years we experienced the challenge of governments for instance to put an AI strategy together and compare notes with their peers in other countries. A global mega shift like AI can no longer be managed in isolation. In our emerging Innovations Age, we will quickly see more and more very different but similar challenges, demanding at least partly global solutions.

Positive Governmental Advances

Another interesting shift is unfolding: For the first time in modern society governments are more advanced than the industry. Many developed countries have a more modern government organization than their industry counterparts. Governments using equally powerful research tools and gain insights in technological, social or economic development than ever before.

Critical shifts in unknown waters

As a result, those governments now tent to take action and try to push the industry to make steps in directions they bare want to make. This leads to rather critical decisions or regulations that pose a serious threat to the entire economy of a country. We see that in the diesel affair in Germany and even more dangerous the security and privacy regulations all over Europe.

OBJECTIVE

Government representatives of all participating countries maintain a relationship with each other, in particular on new and upcoming technology development so that new policies for one country can benefit from policies of another country already during its development.

The ever more substantial developments like Artificial Intelligence, autonomous Machines, Smart Material, Human Body Augmentation, represent huge challenges for governments to develop policies that protects its population but at the same time does not block the necessary progress of its country.

Member Collaboration Projects

Team Collaboration

Initially we are assembling a team of stakeholder to formulate the necessary actions to facilitate the exchange between government representatives. As we progress, we will involve the necessary resources from all stakeholder to collaborate instead of building political fronts.

Creating Policies that are aware of the international implications of such policy

Global Tech Policy Council

Organizing a global tech policy council to get all relevant stakeholder together for very fast exchange and individual execution. We are not even trying to initiate globally homogeneous policies – but at least a valuable enough exchange to ensure policies that are not orthogonal to each other. Making agreements with the selected organizations to start right away.

Political Influence Development

As we are calling governments to create meaningful rules and regulations to collaborate and advance within a given society, We need to create awareness in said society to help the governments in a respective way to understand the level of protection needed and the level of freedom necessary to advance.

SUMMARY

MEMBER LEADERSHIP & SUPPORT

- 1) Coordinating the entire initiative.
- 2) Assembling a team of best suited team members to drive the initiative.
- 3) Helping identifying key contacts within government, that are responsible for the topics we are addressing and are interested in collaborating with us and their peers who maybe members of the World Innovations Forum.
- 4) Finding new ways to identify not addressed threats, overprotective actions potential sources of misleading information.
- 5) Helping spread the word for the initiative.
- 6) Making governments aware of the initiative and helping them understand how it can benefit the respective country.
- 7) Organizing events to meet and structure the best way to collaborate in the individual countries.
- 8) Creating additional programs and ideas that work towards the initiative objectives.

The World Innovations Forum is a facilitator of this initiative but neither making special recommendations regarding the co-working space nor is involved in any transactions or getting any commissions from participating partners.
